PART VIII · PLAYING AND LISTENING · TIPS

When practice isn't working

You practise every day and it is not getting better. Usually the practice, not the player, needs fixing: too fast, too long, or always from the top.

TIP

What you notice, what to check

WHAT YOU NOTICE	CHECK	TURN TO
You stumble in the same place every time	the fingering: write one in and keep it	p. 160
It is fine slowly, wrong at speed	the ladder: three correct, then one notch up	p. 162
You play it from the top every time	small chunks, hardest first	p. 162
New pieces take forever to learn	the scan: key, time, rhythm, patterns	p. 164
You cannot hear your own mistakes	listening: record yourself, sing it	p. 166
It falls apart in front of people	a routine and practising starts	p. 168

Four ways to unstick practice

1. Halve the speed
   Whatever speed you use, try half. Correct and slow beats fast and wrong.

2. Shorten the chunk
   If two bars fail, try one. If one fails, try one beat.

3. Take a break
   Ten short sessions beat one long one. Your brain keeps learning between them.

4. Ask a question
   Write down what goes wrong, and take it to your teacher.

EXAMPLE

Ten minutes left: what do you play?

One bar you keep missing, and a whole piece you know ?

1. Which needs the time more?
2. How many minutes on the hard bar?
3. And the last minutes?

About seven minutes on the hard bar, slowly, then play the whole piece once at the end, for joy.

THINK OF IT Practice does not make perfect: perfect practice does. Slow and correct is the fastest way.
